

SACRAMENTO COUNTY PROBATION

Adult Day Reporting Centers

Adult Day Reporting Centers ensure that individuals released from jail or prison receive the supervision, training, and treatment they need to be successful in their transition back to the community.

On-site supervision and programs

The Adult Day Reporting Centers offer case management, counseling, treatment, programs and education-all delivered on-site. The Probation Department partners with providers such as Strategies For Change and Leaders in Community Alternatives to provide evidence-based programming. A new vocational training and job placement program with Northern California Construction and Training will serve all three sites from a nearby location.

Preventing crime

Participation in the Adult Day Reporting Centers is reserved for individuals who need these intensive services the most: those with serious needs or most at risk of reoffending. Despite the challenges associated with serving this population, Adult Day Reporting

Centers have high rates of success. Most participants complete their first year- a pivotal period in which their risk of recidivism is greatest- without incurring any new criminal convictions. This success means less crime achieved at a fraction of the cost of incarceration.

Successful reentry

Reentry begins before the individuals' return home from jail or prison. Probation officers conduct pre-release visits at six Northern California prisons and the Sacramento County branch jail to ensure that inmates slated to return to Sacramento County successfully transition into participation at the Adult Day Reporting Centers. Then, upon their release, participants immediately meet with an intake officer and receive a screening by an eligibility specialist for services such as General Assistance, SSI, CalFresh, Medi-Cal, Veterans Benefits and CalWorks. A registered nurse assesses current medical conditions, assists with obtaining medications and makes county clinic referrals.

Individually tailored programming

Once assigned to an Adult Day Reporting Center, participants are screened with a risk and needs assessment and by a mental health clinician. Based on the results, participants receive an individual case plan that may include cognitive behavioral programming, education, housing referrals, vocational training and job placement.

2010/2011 RECIDIVISM OUTCOMES

■ Convictions ■ No Convictions

88% of Reporting Center participants have no new criminal convictions during their first year in the Sacramento community.

Giving back to the community

The Adult Day Reporting Centers serve Sacramento County not just by preventing crime, but also by cleaning up our neighborhoods. Each participant must complete a minimum of two days of community service through the Probation Work Project. Individuals who volunteer for additional community service earn money that is applied to victim restitution.

On-site cognitive behavioral curricula includes:

Thinking for a Change: provides cognitive restructuring, social skills development and problem solving.

Seeking Safety: addresses co-occurring post – traumatic stress and develops safe relationship structuring.

Criminal Lifestyles: targets criminal thinking, attitudes and behavior.

Anger Management: emphasizes positive behavioral rehearsal.

Substance Misuse: builds a foundation for recovery and managing relapse warning signs.

On-site staff include:

- Registered nurse
- Eligibility specialist
- Wellness counselor
- Case manager
- Re-entry transition specialist
- Probation officers
- GED teacher
- Individual and group counselors

Probation officers provide supervision, engage with offenders in pro-social interactions, support program goals and ensure accountability with the clients. These activities are shown to protect public safety and promote reentry success of individuals within the community.

“My probation officer wouldn’t quit on me and worked with my family to help get me on the right path. I’d probably be back in prison or dead if not for this program.”
