Juvenile Field Services

Juvenile Field Services (JFS) utilizes evidence-based, trauma-informed, family-focused strategies to aid in the wellness and rehabilitation of youth and families who find themselves involved in the juvenile justice system.

Officers conduct detailed risk assessments in order to determine the appropriate level of supervision.

Working with parents, schools, counseling specialists, and community-based organizations, Officers develop a case plan to address criminogenic needs.

- Home Supervision / Electronic Monitoring
- Out-of-Home Placement
- Candidacy Assessment Unit & REDY-Go!
- Community Supervision Units
- Needs-Based Supervision
 - Juvenile Justice Diversion and Treatment Program (JJTDP)
 - Commercially Sexually Exploited Children (CSEC)
 - Juvenile Sex Offender/Arson
 - Black Child Legacy Campaign (BCLC)
 - Age of Majority
 - VOYA/DJJ Re-Entry

REDY-Go!

Re-Entry Development for Youth

- A core tenet: Re-Entry begins at commitment
- Re-entry planning is a coordinated effort for a youth's transition and reintegration into the community.
- REDY-Go! planning consists of:
 - A comprehensive assessment of strengths and needs
 - Development of individualized transition and case plans
 - Creating connections to community-based services
 - Family engagement
- REDY-Go! brings together a collaborative team of the youth and their family, YDF Officers, YDF support services, JFS Officers, and community service providers

CAU

Candidacy Assessment Unit

- Once the youth is placed on Probation the CAU process begins
- CAU Officers complete Risk/Needs assessments to determine potential for recidivism and to identify strengths
- Youth are also evaluated for imminent risk of being removed from home
 - A "reasonable candidate" as defined by Title IV-E
- Referrals to evidence-based community interventions are selected based on the youth's individual risks and needs
- Connections to programs are often made on-site
